El examen de las condiciones de las mujeres inmigrantes latinoamericanas en España nos sugiere una realidad de exclusiones encadenadas. Realidades que son resultado de un proceso en el que intervienen, por un lado, factores de exclusión iniciales como la condición femenina (intrínseca), la condición inmigrante (circunstancial) y la condición de excluida (derechos). Y por otro, factores de exclusión contextuales de la sociedad española y de las latinoamericanas. Elementos como la política migratoria, el mercado de trabajo y un discurso social español que desvaloriza a estas mujeres, y elementos de origen como el papel social de la mujer en los países de América Latina que guían sus actuaciones y modos de vida en destino. Todos estos factores las clasifican como grupo en riesgo social.
